Aunt of John Purroy Mitchel Was Figure in Irish History.

PHILADELPHIA, July 30.—News has been received by friends in this city of the death in Newry, Ireland, on July 11 of Mrs. Henrietta Mitchel Martin, widow of John Martin, the famous Member of Parliament. Mrs. Martin was the last survivor of the leaders of Young Ireland.

She was the sister of John Mitchel, the mention of whose name never fails to stir the blood of an Irish patriot, for he was the greatest of that little group of literary Nationalists who aspired to make the liberation of Ireland one of the revolutions of the "year of revolutions," 1848.

John Mitchel described himself as a broken man after the defeat. He had thrown himself once for all against the hard world, he said, and never after that were his heart and soul engaged in a cause. But his sister continued to interest herself in Irish affairs and inspired many men of later generations with a belief in the old Meals.

men of later generations with a belief ir the old ideals.

Mrs. Martin's husband, John Martin was also an advanced Nationalist and the was also an advanced Nationalist and the colleague of John Mitchel. Together with Mitchel, P. J. Smyth and John B. Dillon, Martin was sentenced to penal servitude and deportation in the '40s. On his return to Ireland he became Member of Parliament for Meath under the leadership of Isaac Butt.

One of Mrs. Martin's nephews, Capt. John Mitchel of the Confederate army.

John Mitchel of the Confederate army, was killed in the attack on Fort Sumter; another nephew, William Martin, fell in Pickett's famous charge at Gettysburg, and a third nephew, the father of John Purroy Mitchel, Collector of the Port of New York, served as a Captain on the staff of Major-Gen. John B. Gordon.
